M. and 4 was in the city yesterday, having been ordered P. M., and there were fully a thousand wounded from St. Louis to bring forward Capt. Nicklin's remaining in the neighborhood of the battleground on Sunday evening. Judging from what I saw, I should say there were 3,000 to 4,000 wounded and from 1,500 to 2,000 killed of the Confederate forces in the fight on Sunday.

A deserter says that the rebels encamped within 1,200 yards of our camps on Saturday night, and planted twenty-four pieces of cannon, and could hear the tattoo of our drums. A shell from the gunboat Tyler or Pittsburg took part of the leg off of Gen. Hindman, killed his horse and about twenty-five men. He commanded the Arkansas brigade. There were three Johnstons killed in the rebel army at the battle-Bushrod, A. Sidney and the Provisional Governor of Kentucky. A deserter of the 2d Confederate regiment from Memphis, says this regiment had 458 men when the fight commenced, and on Monday all they could muster was about 145. The rest were killed or wounded.

The rebels had 135 regiments averaging from 300 to 800. He thinks the total number of their force about 70,000.

Cowards at Pittsburg. A correspondent of the Cincianati Gazette, giving an account of the first day's battle at Pittsburg, has the following: On the bluffs above the river is a sight that may well make our cheeks tingle with shame for some of our soldiers. There are not less than three thousand skulkers lining the banks! Ask them why they don't go to their places in the line, "Oh, our regiment is all cut to pieces." "Why don't you go to where it is forming again?" "I can't find it," and the hulk looks as if that would be the very last thing he would want to do. Officers are around among them, trying to hunt

Ancient and Modern Battles. The Washington correspondent of the New York Journal of Commerce, says: Now that our people are waiting with intense anxiety the result, in figures, of the great battle and Union victory at Pittsburg Landing, it may be well to recall a few particulars from the pages history respecting the killed in battle. When the Greeks stood forth with only ten thousand men, to repel the Persian army of five hundred thousand, the slain left on the field numbered no less than two hundred thousand. At the battle of Marengo, the Austrians lost six thousand in killed and twelve thousand taken prisoners, while the number of French who were killed is said to have been far greater. At Leipsic, the united armies of France, Austria, Russia and Prussia, amounted to four hundred thousand, and when the conflict closed eighty thousand had been been slain, one half of whom were French, who also lost sixty-five pieces of artillery. At Waterloo, the French left twenty thousand dead on the field of battle, having lost many more in their retreat, and the whole number of their guns captured was three hundred; the English lost thirteen thousand men, six hundred officers, and thirteen generals; the Prussian loss was also great, but not now remembered. The whole force of the French engaged was one hundred and fifty thousand, that of the English thirtythree thousand, and that of the Prussians forty-To the Subscribers in Indianapolis to two thousand. From Baltimore.

Baltimore, April 14.—The U. S. steamer Hercules, Thomas S. Dougan, Lieutenant Commanding, reached this port this morning, having the schooner Pride, previously noticed as being captured, and the sloop Wren and Velna, both captured off Great Wiconico. On board were five passengers from Rico, one of them a captain in the rebel service. On searching the vessel, there was found a large mail containing about two hundred letters, a number of which were addressed to persons in Baltimore, and a large number to persons in various parts of the State of Maryland. On searching the crew, there was also found two thousand dollars in old Virginia note. The sloop in ballast was coming back to get a CONGRESSIONAL. WASHINGTON, April 14. SENATE.-Mr. Carlile presented petitions in privilege in the mails as Republican papers.

Mr. Sumner presented a potition 700 feet long, signed by 15,000 women, praying for the abolition of slavery. Mr. Wilson called up the resolution of inquiry tacked them in the rear. This latter force sucif further legislation is necessary to enforce the ceeded in driving the rebel gunners from their articles of war preventing the reclamation of supply train, which was captured. They also slaves from within the lines of the army.

Mr. Grimes at some length reviewed the instances lately occurring in Gen. He stated similar instances in Iowa and Illinois, and he thought it high time that Congress should adopt some legislation in regard to this matter. There were as many different systems as there were military departments. Some slaves were flogged and returned, others shot, others called contraband and admitted within the lines, and others prohibited from entering the lines, as in the celebrated order No. 3 of Gen Haileck, which ought to be countermanded and forever erased in obedience to the popular feeling. He thought that great amounts of information could be obtained from these people. Coming, as they do, from the enemy's line, they were properly availed of. The Northwest would not submit to any temporary or compromising policy now. They had suffered enough already, and they demand that this rebellion should be crushed out. The forts of the South Atlantic were yet to be captured, and must be held for years to come. How should these be governed when recaptured?
